TAXATION IN AUSTRALIA

Most people who have lived long in the colonies have often been amused at the large amount of misconception which prevails in the old world communities regarding the real character of the life in the colonies. Home in Australia. We are, in the estimation of many, little better than outer barbarians; the country we inhabit is an untamed wilderness; our flowers are red and our trees are black; the climate of the province of the Empire seems to be regarded—making some allowance for the greater enlightenment which prevails after the lapse of nineteen centuries—pretty much as was a portion of ancient Mytilene, when the poet said that the island of the Aegean Sea was ground was covered with serpents, and the air was such that no man could inhale it and live. The peasants in the parish workhouses recoil with loathing from the sun, and the only thing that glids the darkness of our horizon is the gold which we are in a position to export. Visitors, who are, comparatively speaking, well informed, and most things, and are frequently of high attainment which, they say, upon arrival at Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney or Brisbane, at beholding the signs of progress and culture which meet them at every turn; and it seems to strike them as not a little ridiculous that they should have been so long in finding themselves at home among people whose language, habits, and ideas are pretty much on a level with

The civilization of the old world, with all its concomitant advantages and defects, has been transplanted to the "new," if geologists will suffer us so to call it, and, taken together with the soil. We have brought with us all the elements of the old life of England—the creeds and social instincts of the race from which we have sprung, and the community of interests we enjoy finds an appropriate expression and adequate protection in Governments which on day after day are to be seen to be struggling to magnify or to depreciate the importance of the colonies as a whole or taken separately; but it is well at times to endeavour to ascertain our actual and relative position, and this can be most readily and accurately done by an appeal to the facts.

The other day I drew attention to the fact that at the end of 1872 the population of all the Australian colonies was 1,764,342, and it may now be interesting to add that the amount of their aggregate revenues was £8,599,115, of which, however, only £9,039,534 was derived from property taxes, the balance being obtained from the various other sources of taxation. The gross revenue of Victoria was

£3,734,422; of New South Wales, £2,794,274; of Queensland, £996,323; of South Australia,

$897,442; of Tasmania (exclusive of licenses), £271,354; and of Western Australia, £105,300. A large portion of the revenue of each of the colonies is derived from the sale of land, and the proceeds of land sales, rents, &c. That which the colonies are deriving from land sales and rent may be regarded in the light of an endowment, and most of them are so. The endowment was first made in the colony of South Australia has probably turned her land fund to the best account, and her career so far as it has been influenced by a fair application of the principles upon which the endowment was first made, has been entirely discredited to the shams promulgated by Mr. Edward Gibbon Wakefield. Queensland, also, in the system of land grants which she adopted, recognized the wisdom of making the proceeds of the sale of Crown lands the source of the introduction of a small number of persons alone can give them value. New South Wales is at present living on her capital, and the £150,000 which the Government sold Parliament for the purchase of two millions of acres of land for the sale of land for the last half-year must already have been drawn upon to a considerable extent to pay the salaries of Government clerks. It is true some of the proceeds of the sale of land have been applied to interest on the debt which we have incurred for public works,—or, as we should phrase it, “reproductive” public works—such for instance, as the £75,000 which the Government had to raise for the purpose of the erection of a new lunatic asylum. The income which the different Governments receive in the shape of railway, telegraph, and postal receipts is really a portion of the world’s endowment, and this may be concerned, even if an insufficient payment, having regard to the value of the service rendered by the public to the individual. Eliminating, then, these bona-fide taxation are about four millions and three

The amount of taxation which a man has to contribute is a matter of very small moment so long as he has the ability to pay, and so long as the levy is upon him in the most insidious form of Customs duties. The colonists of the United States are so used to the taxation which they pay for the general government of the country is inappreciable, and would probably never receive attention but for the industry of 'tax-mongers' who are always ready to stir up without knowing it. When it is ignominiously announced from the stump that every man, woman, and child in New South Wales has to pay Mr. Lloyd's tax, and that Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Jones, and Mr. Robinson stand aghast at the enormity, the applause, the cry of retrenchment to the echo, but forthwith proceed to light their pipes, and with all conceivable good humour pay their score to Boniface and liquidate their liabilities to the Government at one and the same time.

Among the principal considerations which enter into the cost of Government in Australia is the amount of the public debt, and the extent of the area and the scattered position of the people who are to be concerned. In this column we have to find out governed. In fact, money we have to face both three times as much as we have to face in the United States, and to our numbers, and our population is thinly distributed over a most extensive area. We have for years past been told, that—inasmuch as we have a large number of the machinery necessary for the protection of life and property, and the administration of the law—our proportionate taxation will diminish in the ratio of our increase in numbers. We have heard the statement made so often, and with such great effect, that we had well nigh come to regard it as incontrovertible. But, unfortunately, however, we think it safer to consider that bullels will be multiplied and our public debt will grow rapidly as fast as our ability to keep pace with the demands of the colony. The colony of New South Wales, in proportion to her population, has the largest debt of any colony in the group; but she is making great efforts to open the country to settlement, and to increase her population. The amount of her public debt is £1,000,000, and her annual taxation proper was for the year ending 31st March, 1868, £508,203, or at the rate of $3 16s. 1d. per head. The people of Western Australia, whose indebtedness is merely nominal, have to pay at the rate of $3s. 4d. per head. The colony of Victoria has a public debt of £1,000,000, and her annual taxation proper is £520,000. Although their public debt is nominal, and £200,000 it should be borne in mind that the population does not much exceed 25 000, a fact which in itself is sufficient to account for the high price which they have to pay for government. As far as the rate of taxation goes, New South Wales and Victoria, and South Australia, Tasmania and Western Australia, together. The taxation of Victoria amounts to £1,686,348; or at the rate of £2 1s. 3d. per head, being at the rate of £2 1s. 3d. per head, amounts to £2,098,682; or at the rate of £2 1s. 10d. per head. We pay at the rate of 3s. 8d. a year more than Victoria, but then our proportionate indebtedness in the matter of interest is not so great. It is placed over a larger territory. We regard the comparison as by no means unfavourable. The taxation of New South Wales for 1872 was £275,649; or at the rate of £1 8s. 7d. per head, being at the rate of £1 8s. 7d. per head, being at the rate of £1 8s. 9d. per head. The debt of Tasmania is proportionately greater than that of Victoria, but it is not so large as to have the very small difference of 2d. per head in the cost of government. South Australia, however, has not got out some large public works, and we are disappointed that it has not done so. It is not economically if not the best governed colony of Australia. Queensland and Western Australia are the colonies in which the cost of government taxation exceeds that of the United Kingdom, which in the year ending 31st March, 1872, was equal to £2 2s. 8d.

per head. This rate, however, was arrived at on the basis of the gross revenue for local as well as public

tion of these gentlemen much of the success of the evening was due. It is estimated nearly 3000 Orangemen were present.

Mr. Anderson, one of the three bush missionaries employed by the N. A. W. Missionary Society, has during the last three months been itinerating in the sparsely districts of the colony. During this period the above-named "Bushman" has travelled 1319 miles, and held fifty-nine services in such remote and isolated localities as are not commonly supplied with the means of grace. Mr. Anderson carried the same time visited 400 families, and sold over 1000 copies of the Bible, realising an amount of £138 to the N. A. W. Missionary Society. He also gave away 48 copies of the Bible, and 12 long evangelising tracts, distributed over 2000 tracts. Correspondent particulars of the labours of the two other missionaries of the same society have not been reported, as
